Learning Library

Could you benefit from an innovative, engaging and comprehensive learning library to support your learning and development programs?

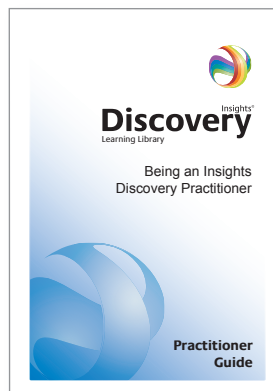

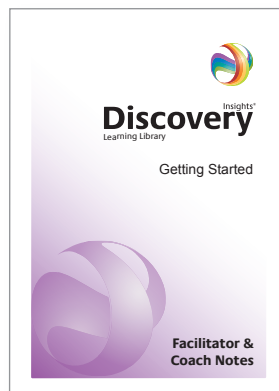

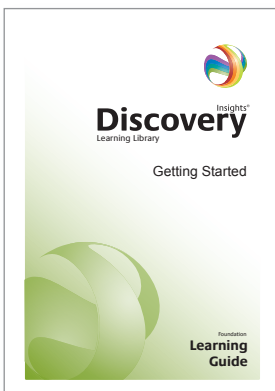

Imagine how you could bring alive your coaching and training interventions if you had a suite of material to support both the learner and the facilitator.

Would your people benefit from a learning resource that supported their classroom learning but also allowed them to develop in their own time and in their own space?

The Discovery Learning Library is a learning resource encompassing a wide range of personal and professional development topics. Available online and in print, the learning library addresses many of the major issues facing today's managers and presents practical, results-orientated advice on several issues from team-building and goal-setting to creativity - topics designed to improve individuals' personal and professional effectiveness.

Experienced online or in print, the learning library can be used as a series of individual, issue-specific, learning guides. Alternatively, guides can be combined to form a learning pathway. Either way, they are an invaluable resource to support classroom training and/or e-learning programs.

Insights Discovery Learning Library Resources

Each guide takes approximately 90 minutes to complete, and contains a series of optional exercises and suggested reading. In addition, there are complementary Facilitator and Coach Notes for every Learning Guide, providing a comprehensive resource to enable the coach, manager or facilitator to navigate the participant through the learning journey.

The online learning library also offers some additional functionality, including interactive exercises, personalized sections of the participant's Insights Discovery Personal Profile and the option to have a personal coach track the participant's progress through a support web site.

Over 40 titles are available to support the transformation of individuals, teams and organizations.
